Solid wood floors had been laid down long before the parquet blocks or other type of parquet was appeared. Due to the solidity of the board through the entire thickness (consists of one piece of wood), solid wood has always been considered as a scent of respectability and good taste. With proper care and maintenance the solid wood will serve from 50 to 200 years and like a family treasure, it can be handed down from generation to generation.

CHEVRON FLOORING

The “chevron” laying was originated many centuries ago in France. The first samples of such laying were appeared in the XVI century, while the first written records of it were found in the description of the Palace of Versailles. Today, “chevron” is again in the peak of popularity – its elegant sophistication has already conquered many countries.

“Chevron” – is an advanced type of the “Herringbone pattern”. To produce such kind of parquet boards, the ends of the boards are cut in a special way. At the junction, they do not form a zig-zag but a straight line. It is fashionable type of flooring, which will never lose its relevance.
